EXTRA! EXTRA!

ASHLAND, N. H., Nov. 9.—Edward Dow, chief of police of this town, was shot and killed today on the main street when he attempted to arrest an unidentified man who is believed to be an escaped convict. The man, who had been looting about the town several days, was approached by Chief Dow, who, placing his hand on his shoulder, said he was going to place him under arrest. "You are not," replied the gunman, whipping out a revolver and the weapon fired six shots into the officer's body. He then ran and escaped. The entire police force (his and surrounding towns are searching for the man. The fire alarm was sounded and the firemen and a posse of citizens joined in the hunt.

IRONWORKERS TO SECEDE FROM A. F. OF L.

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Structural ironworkers who are members of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, will secede from that organization and incorporate in a new, independent body to settle a strike in the metropolitan area of 18 months' duration, according to Charles A. Howard, formerly a delegate of the old organization and one of the organizers of the new union.

ERECTS CLOTHES POLE IN JERSEY; FINED

OFFICERS LIED AT PROBE, MITCHELL SAYS

Washington, Nov. 9.—The Mitchell hearing was profoundly stirred today by the new accusation made against the War Department by the Colonel, that it had permitted an Austro-Hungarian, count flying, organization to set up a commercial flying business "within striking distance of the Panama Canal Zone."

Washington, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Another ever-revolving canard of accusations was turned loose today by Colonel William Mitchell, against those in charge of the military and naval air services.

Through his counsel, Representative Frank R. Reid, the Colonel informed the court martial trying him because of his previous utterances in the air controversy that he was fully prepared to prove his charges.

SUGGS AND MANAGER SUSPENDED BY BOARD

Check Suggs, New England heavyweight champion, his manager, Dave Lamanian, and his second, Edward Suggs and Sam Arato, were indefinitely suspended by the Massachusetts Boxing Commission at the State House today. The suspension came after a dispute at a New Bedford boxing tournament in which Suggs participated.

Jack Sharkey, of New Jersey, was suspended for two months. Sharkey claimed that his arm injury, both

BLAZER TELLS OF LIFE OF HIS IMBECILE GIRL

LITTLETON, Col., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—An old-fashioned country doctor, Dr. Harold E. Blazer, took the stand today at the opening of court in his own defense at a trial where he is charged with slaying his own daughter in a 14-year-old imbecile. The courtroom was jammed as Dr. Blazer in a low voice answered

STOCKS SLUMP IN BEAR RUSH ON N. Y. MARKET

New York, Nov. 9 (U.S.).—A sell was administered to the stock market and the cotton market today, resulting in general declines. The shrinkage in cotton prices was due to the addition of 100,000 bales to the government's estimate of "probable yield."

Other stocks slumped as the result of a bear rush. Profits and the selling of the market were up to $7,948,000. The market was the New York clearing house banks. Sales in the first three hours aggregated 1,500,000 shares. General Motors, Dupont and other bullish standard-bearers were reactionary. Call money moved up to 6 percent when calling of loans reached a total of about $15,000,000, but bankers do not look for any permanent hardening of money rates.

BEADED BAG POINTS TO A WOMAN IN MYSTERY

Through the finding of a beaded handbag near where Vito Favuzza was slain in Winchester, the police hope to learn the identity of the woman who owned it and who also is believed to have been slain. Fingerprints on a small mirror are important evidence. Mrs. Favuzza, who is shown with her husband in the small picture, refuses to believe there is a woman in the case. She is the mother of two children, Eva, a baby, and Nina, shown here.

RIVALS FOR LOVE OF SLAIN PIANIST ARE SOUGHT IN NORTH END

Police searching for the murderer who crushed the skull of Vito Favuzza, a musician, and hid the body in a clump of woods in Winchester, where it was found Saturday afternoon, have focused their activities on the North End, where they are seeking two women; both friends of the dead man—who may have been the direct cause of the killing.

It is known by the police that rivalry for the affections of the murdered man was keen between two and Joseph Perari, of the State police, is working along the theory that an admirer—or husband of one of these women, both of whom are widely known in the night life of Boston, may have interrupted a rendezvous and killed Favuzza in a jealous rage, spiriting the woman away.

"I could tell," he said, "his spine without visible emotion."

"She couldn't even indicate if she was in pain. And then I couldn't discover where it was. Then she would go into convulsions and become rigid."

"Her legs, feet, arms and hands were less developed than those of a six-year-old child. Her body was larger, but greatly malformed, and the spine was twisted almost into the shape of the letter S."

"Her chest bones and ribs protruded as far as to be visible through the skin."

"She could rattle a pile of paper and occasionally would unuse herself by tearing the paper to pieces. She did this by rolling on top of the paper and then pulling it with her left hand."

"Although she weighed about 50 pounds she was as helpless as an infant of two months."

MADE STRANGE SOUNDS.

"At night she could turn in bed. She made an unintelligible sound that indicated that she was in distress or wanted attention."

"Although the defendant's voice broke slightly earlier in his testimony, he apparently retained his composure as he read the evidence."

"I sleep in the same room with Hazel from the time she was an infant."

"Typhoid and pneumonia were numbered among the many illnesses that beset the 'child-woman' from infancy, the witness said."

"What her father was saying, Mrs. Frances Babson, a younger daughter, sat with her head bowed, sobbing her face with her hands, as occasionally her body shook with grief."

"We came to Colorado in 1919, acting at Montevista," he said. "We moved to Englewood, Colo., in December 1924, several months after the death of my wife. After Mrs. Blazer's death I cared for her myself."

"I thought often what might have been of Hazel when I died. I never talked the matter over with my wife before her death."

"Once when I was away on business Hazel was stricken ill and after doctors said she would die. When I returned home she looked up at me and almost laughed. She was almost well within 24 hours."

GAVE UP HIS PRACTICE.

"I stopped practicing in April 1924, when I had spells of numbness, which made my head feel heavy and I couldn't see very well. I could think at these times but I could never be sure my conclusions were right, and I was afraid I might make a mistake in practicing for patients, so I quit practicing."

"These spells started coming on six or eight years ago. They were the same as those I suffered during the last two years, but not so pronounced. They got worse after Mrs. Blazer's death and occurred sometimes when I had been up a day and a night and I was unable to articulate, think or see. I have almost lost one eye and lost the use of my left arm."

"When I was twenty-three years old my skull was fractured by a fall from a ladder, but I apparently recovered."

"In the year prior to Hazel's death I had eight or ten spells—several after I came to Englewood."

"I don't know whether or not I ever lost my mind during these spells. I rarely ate during these spells."

"I have a faint recollection of conversation with my son-in-law and my daughter on February 24, 1925."

"It was this day that Hazel was found dead in the room with her father."

"I am sure I remember any thing about it. I don't remember when they came home."

SEVERAL AN OBJECTION.

"While Dr. Blazer was telling of his 'spells and numbness' the State's attorney took notice of an objection and presented evidence which injected his first objection—about the witness' loss of memory after the slaying. Attorney Blazer changed his questions to conform to the desires of the State's attorney. The witness said he was a member of the Presbyterian Church and that Hazel was baptized in this church."

Dr. Eliza Taylor Ransom of Bay State road, who, while in sympathy with Dr. Blazer's motive in putting his imbecile daughter out of existence, declares the Colorado physician broke the law, and (above) Miss Edlen Salisbury Moore, Cambridge woman, who believes monstrosities should be put out of the way at time of birth. At lower center is Dr. Blazer. The Rev. Frederick Palladino, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Boston (upper right) says Dr. Blazer erred in taking life, and earnestly advocates eugenic marriage to prevent monstrous births, and lower right is Mrs. Francis Bishop, who testified in her father's defense.

Most Critics, However, Agree Dr. Blazer Broke the Law and Must Suffer the Consequences of His Act.

Comment, praising and condemning the act of Dr. Harold E. Blazer in ending the existence of his daughter-monstrosity at Littleton, Colo., continued to be made to the Boston Evening American today.

By men and women of standing, the judgments were passed and the great glory of the public still remains divided.

The Rev. Frederick Palladino, D. D., pastor of the First Methodist Church of Boston, from a point of view, nothing can justify the taking of human life. "The case of Dr. Blazer leaves this to me," he said. "I am not a lawyer, but I am a man of God. I can say this of the daughter of Dr. Blazer, but it does not at all mean to go back upon my principle that no one can be justified in taking human life under any condition."

There is no question about it. But human life in any shape is sacred. To excuse the taking of it under certain conditions would eventually lead to looseness in regarding its sacredness.

I have no hesitation in saying that the lower type of feeble-minded in this State would be better off dead than alive.

I can say this of the daughter of Dr. Blazer, but it does not at all mean to go back upon my principle that no one can be justified in taking human life under any condition.

Miss Edlen Salisbury Moore, No. 35 Prescott street, Cambridge II, seems to me that any intelligent and sympathetic doctor would not allow a hopelessly deformed child to continue to exist. If he realized the sort of life to which such a person would be subjected, he could not decently do so.

LIFE under these conditions is unbearable, especially for the relatives. In cases of poverty there is no way for people to care for the deformed one, and in any condition or circumstance, the more humane thing is the relief which death would bring.

As a breaker of the Divine Law, Dr. Blazer's situation is one to be met with personally between himself and his God.

Mrs. E. Leonard, staff nurse at the Massachusetts General Hospital: The hospital of old were accustomed to take these measures in relieving society of sons and daughters who were not up to the physical standard required by the State, but surely society and civilization have made some progress since that time.

Personally, I believe a child born with the physical handicap possessed, should have been killed at birth. She was beyond the aid of medical science, and pitifully unable ever to progress far in mind or soul.

However, the laws decree that no human being has the right to take another person's life, and if laws are made they must be observed.

Civilization is an expanding thing, and I believe that laws will in time be made to govern the conditions under which a child is born into the world such as Dr. Blazer's daughter, so that a similar crime will not necessarily occur again.

Believes Solution of Problem Lies in Future

Pearl Druggan instructor in the Psychological Department, Perkins Institute for the Blind, influenced by heredity from parents until physically and mentally, undoubtedly play a big part in children brought into the world such as Dr. Blazer's daughter.

These conditions and future conditions must be remedied by education and intelligent instruction, so that repetition of the case will not occur.

While Dr. Blazer cannot be condemned for his act, and while every individual possesses the right to live under the laws of our country, nevertheless the child was a pitiful burden to society and natural death would have been a mercy.

The account of ballots cast at the city election for City Council candidates in Wards 3 and 11, began today in the office of the Election Commissioners. With half the votes tabulated, but slight changes were noted.

In Ward 8 Council-elect John P. Dowd increased his lead over Thomas P. Phelan by fifteen votes. Ward 8 Council-elect Michael J. Ward made a slight increase. The vote showed the entire ward went for Phelan and Ward for the Council. The vote of Council-elect Edward W. Phelan still maintained his lead over William J. Mowly, Jr., in Ward 11.

This account was expected to be completed late today.

BANK OFFICIAL DROPPED

Pittsford, Nov. 8.—Frederick C. Nichols, treasurer of the Pittsford Savings Bank for nineteen years, was dropped from that post today as a result of irregular transactions alleged by State Bank Commissioner Roy A. Hovey.

According to bank officials, the deposed treasurer is involved for nearly half a million dollars in banks throughout the State and in personal transactions, but the Pittsford bank is unaffected.

In a statement read to the bank trustees during the session, in which the treasurer's resignation was accepted, Commissioner Hovey denied Nichols' assertion that he is the victim of attacks by enemies.

"This department is responsible for Mr. Nichols being relieved," said the statement. "This action has no connection with the Street case."

"was detained and transferred because he told the truth."

That government aviators are put to unnecessary hazards and many killed as a result.

That the government has failed to thwart a project to give a foreign organization a foothold near the Panama canal and to provide adequate air protection to Hawaii and the Philippines.

Among other things the attorney said, the defense would prove that the Shenandoah, at the time she was lost, was not a modern airship in all respects.

LANDOWNE PROTEST.

"That an officer of the Navy Department endeavored to get Mr. Landowne, the widow of Commander Landowne, to give false testimony, retracting her former statement that Commander Landowne was ordered to take the Shenandoah on her fatal flight to the 'White West over the protest'."

"That the War Department officers have been ordered to conform their expressions on national defense on the lines promulgated by the department."

The accuracy of a number of statements made by high army and navy officials before committees of Congress was attacked by the defense, who said he would prove that their testimony was false.

The statement gave the following test of fidelity in government aviation between June 1, 1919, and June 30, 1923: Navy, 25; army, thirty-nine; air mail, forty.

Since last June 30, the statement added, there have been twenty deaths in Army aviation alone, and that the Navy borrowed from the Marines for the Massachusetts expedition, not suited for that mission.

GEN. FRIES FIRST WITNESS.

"A total of 1,800 planes is used by the War Department in computing the strength of the United States in aircraft. Only sixty-nine planes are modern, up to date and destined for the purpose for which they are intended, and sixty are being used for training purposes, leaving nine hundred and thirty planes untrained."

Gen. Fries, first witness, testified that the attention of the naval staff, before the House Aircraft Committee, were inaccurate. General Drum said 4,000,000 pounds of gas would be required to effectively gas such an area, but General Fries said a lesser quantity would serve.

The court's decision sustaining the defense was taken by a defense counsel to indicate that the vast amount of evidence he has collected bears on the general air service controversy would be admitted as evidence. Colonel Mitchell smiled broadly.

District Attorney Announces
Plan to Not Pros Case Against
One of the Accused Youths

The task of selecting a jury in the trial of four defendants charged with the slaying of James Fenneau, Waltham car barn wachman, began today in Middlesex Superior Court, East Cambridge.

District Attorney Reading opened a surprise at the opening of the trial by announcing he proposed to not press the murder indictment against Peter V. King of Brookline.

As a result only three men appeared in the witness case, prepared to battle for their lives. They were Edward J. Heinlein, John J. Devereux and John J. McLaughlin. Joseph H. Bennett is charged with being an accessory before and after the fact of the murder, and before and after the fact of robbery while armed of Cashier William J. Main.

The four defendants, all young men, were well dressed and apparently calm.

MANY ARE CHALLENGED.

By a ruling of Judge Frederick Folsk, they were forced to do their own challenging of prospective jurors, a motion to permit their attorneys to do it having been overruled. This motion was made by former District Attorney of Middlesex County John J. Higgins recently associated with defense counsel.

A venire of 400 citizens had been prepared, two courtrooms being used to house them. At lunch recess eighteen talismans had been called and challenged, three by Bennett, two by McLaughlin, two by Devereux, two by Heinlein, four by the State, and five were excused.

The first juror chosen was the twenty-eight talisman called Charles E. Wheeler, a chauffeur, of No. 385 Medford street, Somerville. Wheeler is married and the father of three children. He proved acceptable to all and took his place in the jury box.

James A. Wakefield, forty-nine years old, still hand of Lowell, was the second juror chosen. After marriage.

It is estimated that at least two days will be required in which to select a jury, because of the large number of challenges.

District Attorney Reading, who is in charge of the prosecution, said he expected the trial would take two and a half weeks.

About a score of government witnesses were on hand, and it is believed the defense will call equally as many as character witnesses.

Motions made by counsel for each defendant for separate trials were overruled.

JUSTICE MOVES SWIFTLY.

The slaying occurred on Sunday morning, October 4, the three men making their escape in an automobile, after holding up and robbing Cashier Main.

Early in the morning of October 7, three days later, State and local police, heavily armed, captured the five young men in their homes in Brighton, Allston and Brookline.

Taken to the Brighton police station, the accused youths were then rushed to Boston police headquarters where they were finger printed and photographed.

Immediately thereafter they were transported to East Cambridge, and on being seized by officials of the district attorney's office and State police, were said to have confessed.

The case was presented to the Middlesex Grand Jury, then in session, and in fifty minutes from the time of their arrival in East Cambridge the five men were indicted and remanded to East Cambridge Jail.

A sixth man, C. Raymond Pender of Utica, N. Y., who was arrested with Devereux, was indicted, but the indictment was later not pressed on the belief of District Attorney Reading that the man had no knowledge of the holding and slaying.

According to the district attorney, Pender, a cousin of Devereux, was paying him a visit, and knew nothing of the character of his relative.

After the indictment against Pender was not pressed, he was held in $25,000 bail as a material witness.

QUIGLEY INDICTMENT

BEARING TOMORROW
Juries James M. Quigley of the United States District Court today informed Attorney John P. Penney of Joseph Carroll that at 10 o'clock tomorrow he would hear their motion to quash the indictment against Mayor Lawrence J. Quigley, which were returned several weeks ago on a charge of conspiracy with Charles run-running "syndicate."

SCIENCE at last tells us which kiss we may safely enjoy and which we may enjoy at our peril. In the large picture (above) is the dangerous kiss. This is the "soul kiss," the long, lingering, lovers' delight so often seen in the final grapple of the movie "fade-out." It is, the experts declare, the caress in which germs are swapped and is very dangerous. Above, at right, is the farrowel kiss. A brief, perfunctory osculation generally harmless. Below, at left, the flapper kiss, a dainty, teasing lip touch; a gentle, flitting contact like the breath of a spring breeze, fragrant and cheery and not perilous. At the right, below, the wifely peck, the briefest kiss of all and wholly innocuous.

IDEAL WEATHER VANDALS LOOT FOR WEEK HIGH SCHOOL

An extensive area of high pressure, with accompanying clear, cool weather, covers virtually the entire country today. The local Weather Bureau man, however, fails to show any storm traces which might mar ideal weather conditions for New England for the next few days. Fair and slightly cooler weather is announced for tonight and Tuesday, with fresh northwest winds. Little variance in the thermometer was noted over the weekend and at 10 o'clock this morning the mercury stood at 38, while 35 degrees, at 1 p. m., was the lowest point reached for the weekend. (Greenfield, Me., with 24, was the coldest place in New England.

AGED WOMAN STRUCK BY AUTO IN SOMERVILLE

While attempting to cross Somerville avenue, Somerville, Rosanna Gallagher, seventy-five years of age, of No. 418 Somerville avenue, Somerville, was knocked down by the mid-gear of an automobile, operated by Michael E. Donah of No. 623 Boston avenue, Medford.

GEM THEFT AT WIDOW, 80, DIES TUTTLE HOME IN BLAZE

Mystery surrounds the whereabouts of a platinum ring set and a watch valued at $500 which have disappeared from the home of Henry C. Tuttle at No. 4 Lombard square. The police were notified today of the robbery, but so far have been unable to learn how or when the thieves took the valuables. The loss was not discovered until today by members of the family.

Mrs. Anna M. Insart, 80 years old, a widow living alone on the second floor at No. 127 Ingham street, East Boston, was burned to death today. It is believed her clothing caught fire from the kitchen stove. Virtually all the clothing had been burned from her body when she was found on the stairway by her niece, Mrs. Mary Egan, who lives on the floor below. The aged woman died in the arms of her niece on the stairway.

PILOT DROWNED BOARDING SHIP

Clifford L. McPhail of Brookline, sixty years old, a veteran harbor pilot, fell to his death today while boarding the freighter Kefia Marx near Boston Light. Attempts to revive the body were unsuccessful. McPhail pitched into the water from a ladder and did not resurface. His fellow pilots believe he suffered a heart attack.

McPhail had been a pilot in Boston harbor continuously for thirty-four years. He went out today on Pilot Boat No. 1 to bring to her dock the Kefia Marx, which arrived with a cargo of grain from Portland. He is survived by a wife, Rose, living at No. 216 Clark road, Brookline, and by a son.

For the sixth time within a few months, the Somerville High School was entered over the weekend and considerable damage done to school property. Desks were forced open and from one of them $21 in money stolen. Ink was spilled on the floors and several doors smashed. An attempt was made to force open the school safe, and police are of the opinion that the thieves were searching for the proceeds of the Somerville-Sagitt High School football game, played Saturday afternoon, which they thought may have been kept there. There has been considerable agitation for a night watchman at the school because of the recent break-in. Lieut. Thomas Danney, assisted by Patrolman David M. O'Connell, took finger prints found on the desks and the safe.

Mrs. John J. Rogers Says President Rejected Her Plan of Action

Washington, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Predicting distress unless anti-lynching production is resumed, Mrs. John J. Rogers, representative of Massachusetts, urged President Coolidge today to appoint an impartial board to attempt to settlement of the controversy.

She said later that she received no encouragement, the President adhering to the view that the Federal government can do nothing under its

While industry in the Lowell district, which she had been elected to represent as opponent to her husband, is fortified with an anti-lynching fuel supply for the New England households in New England, she reported, already are feeling the pinch of a coal shortage.

Individuals are unable to buy as much coal, substitutes in more of pound lots, she said, and prices are really have skyrocketed four to five dollars a ton.

In advocating appointment of a board of inquiry, Mrs. Rogers said she was conveying to the President the desire of her constituents for a coal delivery.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Twelve men were selected in less than two hours today for the jury which will sit in Supreme Court to hear the annulment suit brought by Leonard Kip Rhinelandt against Mrs. Alice Beatrice Jones Rhinelandt, on the ground that she misrepresented her race prior to their marriage.

James N. Mills, of counsel for Rhinelandt, subpoenaed each prospective juror in a lengthy examination, questioning him particularly on whether he had children. Two men from New Rochelle were excused when they replied in the affirmative.

The jury was completed tentatively shortly before noon, and court was then adjourned until afternoon to afford Rhinelandt a chance to appear before the jury which was made permanent.

As tentatively selected, the jury is composed of a retired lawyer, a clerk, an art dealer, a heating contractor, a real estate dealer, an exporter, a banker, a business man, a driver, a carpenter, an architect and a contractor.

2 WOMEN RIVALS HUNTED IN KILLING

Another theory that has not been exhausted as yet is that Pavone's woman's companion, whose loaded gun was found near the body, may have been slain at the same time and her body hidden in the woods.

The numerous fingerprints found on the glass of the automobile and on the bottle were in the hands of the woman who was killed. The woman was identified by insurance inspectors. Insurance has already been paid Mrs. Askin on her policy on the car. The number plates were missing and the engine numbers had been filed away, yet the insurance adjusters were able to identify the car by several marks.

Dead Man Visits One of His Mourners

PITTSFIELD, Nov. 9 (A.P.)—Mrs. Annie O'Brien, who conducts a rooming house at No. 68 Union street, was startled when she was paid a visit by William H. Lee, a World War veteran, whose funeral she thought she had attended in Rome, N. Y., on September 10.

A man by the name of William H. Lee died in Rome and had left word that Mrs. O'Brien be notified in case of his death.

The Pittsfield woman went to Rome and thought the dead man was the individual who had boarded at her home. She informed the authorities that he had served in the World War and a military funeral was held for him in Rome.

Mrs. O'Brien was so startled when Lee appeared that she called the police.

Lee explained that he had been employed in South Lee, 15 miles from Pittsfield, for about five months, but had not read the newspaper story of his "death."

The incident made but little impression upon them and they assure they could not recognize either one of the passengers.

From an acquaintance of the slain man the police learned he had an acquaintance to meet two women in Backus street, near Haymarket square, at 10 o'clock, Friday evening. The official assumption is that the meeting was prearranged.

State detective and Sergeant Cassidy interviewed Mrs. Pavone. She could shed little light on her husband's movements. She told the officers her husband had been at home Friday noon and on leaving told her he would not be home Friday night. She had not heard anything about him until the discovery of the body.

Widow Finds Herself Driven Back to Working

"Vito-Vito" carolers, which befell Mrs. Antonietta Pavone, as she looked in a frenzy of grief, as her new life in Rome at 25 Haymarket street, where she kept old until the body of her husband, Vito Pavone, was brought in. Vito—who left his home at 10 o'clock Friday morning, and was on his way to work—was found in the street. "Vito-Vito" was always so good to me.

FIGHTS STATE'S CHARGES IN MACRI CASE

By HERF FORD.

JOHN MACRI, 31, N. Y. Attorney Joseph J. Macri, counsel for Giovanni Macri, 29-year-old girl on trial for murder of her sweetheart, today accused State's Attorney Allag of improper tactics in his case.

As part of his question, the claim that the shooting of John Macri began in the theatre lobby and continued into the street, explained counsel for the defense. "It is stating something that does not appear in the indictment."

"I object to such questions, and also to his specifying that the victim was in the back."

Judge Hinman instructed the prosecutor to incorporate in his question that the State makes such claim.

So many of the squad of thirty-four witnesses called for examination today asked to be excused that Judge Hinman remarked: "Very few of the witnesses here today have not asked to get off."

A count showed that fifteen had offered one plea or another to avoid passing judgment on the accused girl.

Judge Hinman excused 15 witnesses on the spot and will announce decisions in the cases of the others later.

Edward A. Anderson, 30-year-old, farmer, of Woodbury was sworn as sixth juror.

Anderson was the thirteenth witness examined today. He has a wife and three sons.

DEMPSEY'S DOG HERE ON LINER

Herbert W. Brooks, first secretary of the British embassy, arrived from London aboard the Canadian Maritima, Capt. Hensburgh, which docked at East Boston today.

He was bound for Washington. The Maritima had 624 passengers, about 100 remaining aboard as the liner left at noon for New York.

What the Maritima lacked in celebration for her first cabin list, she made up with the size of dogdom. One little black pug was aboard for John Dempsey, having been purchased by the Dempseys during their last trip to London.

The Dempsey dog, with several others of class and breed were in charge of the ship's butcher on the voyage. Another aristocrat among dogs was an Alaskan bond, an open champion, which dog, bound for New York and the Winter shows.

This dog was sold recently in London for $2,000. There were other dogs aboard, some of them having pedigrees as long as the ship's mainmast.

N. H. BOY SAVES TOWN FROM RUIN BY FIRE

Raymond N. H. Nov. 9 (L.N.R.)—Twenty-year-old Albert Pinette saved his town from destruction by fire today.

Awakened by smoke in his room in an apartment adjoining the new Raymond Hotel, the lad raced through the building arousing the men, women and children occupants and crying for help.

Chief of Police Ray Brown, at alerted by the boy's cries, dispatched a messenger for firemen and himself hurried through the hotel awakening the guests in the burning structure.

The top floors of the hotel, a four-story structure, were destroyed and the rest of the building was ruined by smoke and water.

A restaurant and bakery, a grocery and a candy store were also burned or flooded with water. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

For a time the fire threatened to sweep the village. Collapsing of a wall in the hotel cut off telephone communication with the outside world.

Four witnesses called for examination today asked to be excused that Judge Hinman remarked: "Very few of the witnesses here today have not asked to get off."

A count showed that fifteen had offered one plea or another to avoid passing judgment on the accused girl.

Judge Hinman excused 15 witnesses on the spot and will announce decisions in the cases of the others later.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Raise Funds for Brookline Friendly Society at Dance on Tuesday, November 17

THE PHILANTHROPIC BEE is buzzing busily about sundry charming heads of Boston matrons and maids, with resultant plans for dance, bazaar or fête enthusiastically formulated. It's by way of the dance that Mesdames Charles F. Greenough, 24 Dudley R. Howe and Miss Hilda W. Williams plan to corral dollars for the Brookline Friendly Society, and a pleasant way it is, indeed.

FROM 3 TO 1 on the evening of Tuesday, November 17, the hosts of friends of the "friendly" society will gather in the Brookline Town Hall to help on the good work of that excellent charity. And the society's sponsorship is of high degree—trust the trio just before noon tinned to enlist a backing of Social Register stamp.

ALPHABETICALLY SPEAKING Mrs. Francis H. Appleton, Jr., leads off, followed by Mesdames Gaston G. Buron, Gerald R. Boardman, Charles F. C. Boston, Edward D. Bradenbury, William A. Burnham, Norman W. Cabot, James Dean, Samuel Eliot and Theodore Frothingham, Jr.

THEN COMES Mesdames George Frothingham, Jr., Reginald C. Heath, Chadler Hovey, Charles T. King, Robert W. Means, Gordon G. May, John G. Mather, Frederick B. Perry, Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., Fritz B. Taylor, Orin G. Wood and Edgar V. Widdington.

MISS HILDA WILLIAMS is supplying her manager's finger to the good cause, and from her tickets for the dance may be purchased, she is to be reached at her Brookline home, in Walnut place, and for the society's sake welcomes a record-breaking application.

SPEAKING OF THE Social Register, the ticket holders list for Toti dal Monte's concert November 17 at Symphony Hall is a veritable treasure from that small but important volume. Mesdames Harriett O. Abbott, Lorraine Ames, John W. Bartol, Frederick S. Converse, William H. Condit and Robert G. Dodge have reservations.

ALSO MESDAMES CHANNING and Louis Frothingham, Robert G. Shaw, 24 Pierpont St., Walter M. Pratt, Robert A. Leeson, Henry L. Mason, D. Cross Green and a host of others—a long and distinguished roll indeed—have subscribed for the concert which promises a high music treat and benefits the Boston Students' Union.

A BOARD THE STEAMSHIP Paris now sailing to French ports, goes that aristocratic light of Boston and Continental society, Mrs. Hovey J. Allen of Allston, on the North Shore. Winter abroad is the usual program for Mrs. Allen now bound for the Riviera.

SHEETS QUITE AS MUCH at home in smart European circles as here, where, of course, she occupies the social summit as represented by the Assembly Ball, where, Mrs. Allen takes her household suite with her, as well as her newest motor car.

NATIONAL CIVIC FEDERATION members, with their tea at Desmond Fitz Gerald's gallery in Brookline today inaugurated a trio of artistic feasts, continuing on November 18 with a reception at the Museum of Fine Arts and on January 12 at Fenway Court.

BOSTON IS A treasure trove in this regard and Mrs. Edwin Vanhousen of the Fine Arts committee selects the very cream of what Boston offers artistically for the edification of Civic Federation members.

FENWAY COURT, the Art Museum and the Desmond Fitz Gerald Gallery, richly endowed with priceless treasures, enjoy a fame countrywide, the last named holding places as one of America's most famous private collections.

MESDAMES JOHN G. PALFREY, Federation leader, H. Parker Widdington, Ernest Lovering, Robert J. Clark, Frederick S. Mead and Stephen B. Fitzgerald were introduced at the beautiful Fitz Gerald gallery today.

ANIMAL LOVERS heretofore have tomorrow red-lettered in their calendars as Hospitality and Safe Day at the Animal Memorial Hospital, Longwood avenue. Besides the usual bazaar, accompanied by luncheon, afternoon tea, bridge, mah jong, there'll be visiting through the wards.

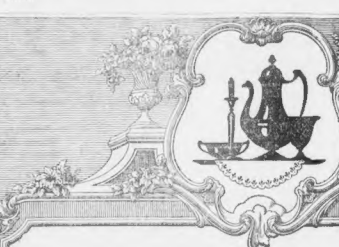

FEW THERE'LL BE who can resist visiting the animal patients at this haven of good will which functions every day in the year and gives free help and solace to hundreds of injured, hungry and neglected animals. Mrs. Alva T. Fuller, Mrs. William F. Allen, and Mrs. John P. Bowditch figure as sponsors, in a fit long and notable.

Silver for Christmas gifts

Silver is an appropriate gift for girls and women of every age. They appreciate and treasure it all their lives. The new member of the family likes a porringer, mug, or spoon which fascinates her with its glitter, and which doesn't break when she pushes it onto the floor for the fun of watching its flight.

The schoolgirl enjoys silver for her dressing table and desk.

The newly engaged girl and the bride welcome silver of their favorite pattern. They anticipate the joy of a luncheon or dining table properly set with the remembrances from friends and family.

The matron delights in silver vases to brighten a dark corner, a coffee service to give pleasant formality to after-dinner coffee, or a tea set for luncheon and afternoon tea.

Our second floor is our silver floor, where you may see many delightful possible Christmas gifts. You may choose something inexpensive or not—each piece is exquisite in design, proportion, and workmanship.

We suggest that you make your selection soon, so that the pieces may be engraved to your liking.

ENGLISH TONE POPULAR FOR CITY HOMES

Modern Architects Follow the Detail of Early Anglo-Saxon Renaissance
By HENRY B. PENNELL.
Head of Pennell, Gibbs & Quinlan, Interior Decorators.

Many architects have not only designed but also decorated city houses of much distinction. On the avenue and side streets of all cities are found splendid town houses, with simple, faultless proportions and exquisite detail, which have seldom been excelled anywhere in character and charm.

Many of these have followed the precedent of English Renaissance examples, such as the work of Adam and other architects of his time.

For the floors, there are murals of various colors for borders or squares laid diagonally, often alternating in color. Floors of another character are of slate in different colors and sizes, burnt tile in heather browns or reds and in an assortment of sizes. Besides these are a large number of manufactured floorings of rubber or of cement with combed textures.

The walls are often of limestone, cream stone or Travertine laid up in masonry. These three natural stones are often imitated in plaster and cement at much less expense. Plaster also is applied in rough or smooth textures, or paint preparations are used to give variation in surface and color.

The ceilings of the lower hall, owing to a restricted height, are most often plain or with low relief ornamentation. When the height of story permits and the character is desired, ceilings have low sequential curves or vaults, or wood beams, purporting to be a part of the construction, but in reality only decoration.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT'S CONDITION IMPROVES

New York, Nov. 9 (AP)—The condition of Chauncey Olcott, veteran actor, who was stricken in Ann Arbor, Mich., ten days ago, was declared to be satisfactory. Olcott was brought to this city by train last week-end and taken to his home, considered by the family a "lucky house" from the fact that he regained his health in it after a similar illness several years ago.

Milady Shops

WALKING sticks with trick handles which open to disclose a wide variety of feminine beauty aids, as well as folding "camp stools" have been imported from England for Boston girls' delight.

They are excellent for long strolls in the woods and, at a moment's notice, unfold and offer a comfortable seat for the owner. They first found favor among the Prince of Wales' set, at the British races of last year, and useful they are gaining rapidly in popularity here.

A devoted street store, which caters exclusively to the tastes of the more fastidious, are offering these sticks. They are made of beautiful polished wood with silver handles. Priced at $15.50.

Surprise that you find by carrying a dainty silver "flask" girls. It is not a flask, but it has the appearance of being one, being the same size and shape.

To the purpose is a powder container. It has a nice shaker top and is excellent for parties. These "flasks" will fit snugly into your friend's hip pocket and can be produced instantly without trouble during a dance.

They are about half the size of the fashionable flasks exported to college men. But only an expert can tell the difference at first glance.

After being treated in leather coats, perfume coats and metal coats, some fashion has now created wraps made entirely of tapestry. They come in a hundred and one designs and in all shades. They are as warm as fur and much more enduring than anything yet seen. Beautiful for colors of fox enhance their beauty.

A large down town department store is showing these strange coats. Whether they will prove a "freak" or for milady to tell. It will take a brave soul to first sport these strange coats along Tremont street.

PRINCE PAUL TO PAY VISIT TO WORCESTER

Leaves Webster After Special Service at Newly-Dedicated Church

Webster, Nov. 9 (AP)—Special services for Prince Paul Christian of Greece were conducted in the Greek Orthodox Church by Archbishop Vassilios today. A banquet followed the ceremony. The prince had planned to attend the dedication of the church yesterday, but was delayed by the breakdown of his auto on the way from New York. He arrived here at 11:30 this morning.

The prince was also a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Roan in Thompson, Conn., and of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Murphy of Worcester. The prince left for Worcester late this afternoon.

Home-Made, but Ends
Coughs in a Hurry
A family supply of dependable cough medicine. Easily made and saves about $2.
If you have a severe cough or chest cold, soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness or difficulty breathing, or if your child wakes up at night with cough and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 24 ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough medicine. It tastes good, and is simple of its low cost, can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief. You can feel this like hold of a cough instantly. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle, and soothes and heals the irritated membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes with such ease and promptness that it is really astonishing.
Pinex is a sweet and highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

POWERS BIG TOPIC OF N. E. CONFERENCE

Martin Insull to Discuss the Significance of Western Investments Here

The program for the assemblage of New England organizations at the New England Conference, to be held in Worcester on Thursday and Friday of this week, is completed, John S. Lawrence, chairman of the Governor's Joint Committee, announced today.

Mr. Lawrence stated that Martin J. Insull of Chicago, brother of Samuel Insull, head of the combined Insull interests, will deliver an address at the afternoon session of Thursday.

He has been asked to tell what the Insull interests have in mind for the future of the valuable water power rights and properties they have recently acquired in northern New England. Also to indicate the view of the future of New England power and industry held by the Insull interests that let them to make such extensive investments in this field.

At this session Samuel Ferguson, president of the Hartford Electric Light Company, will be chairman. Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of directors of the General Electric Company, and Dexter P. Cooper of Eastport, Me., will be the other speakers.

OF VITAL CONCERN.

Martin J. Insull is president of the Middle West Utilities Company of Chicago, in which a number of light, power and traction companies are merged. He is also actively in charge of the power properties acquired in New England.

Commenting on the acceptance of the invitation to make his first public address in New England at the New England Conference, Mr. Lawrence said:

"That the Insull interests, centered primarily in middle Western territory, have seen fit to invest heavily in New England power developments and rights, is a matter of some concern to all New England. Important events are taking place in the New England power field with such rapidity that I doubt if the public realizes just what is happening, or its significance. To develop the facts of our present power situation and the prospects for the future is one of the chief purposes of the power session of the New England Conference at Worcester."

HOOVER TO SPEAK.

The conference will be opened at the Hotel Bancroft at 10 o'clock Thursday, being called to order by Chairman Lawrence. Governor Fuller will address the delegates, representing each of the New England States, a committee on organization will be appointed, and the discussion on "Power" will then open under chairmanship of Samuel Ferguson.

The subject of Friday morning's session will be "Agriculture and Food." Friday afternoon, "Marketing," when Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover will be the principal speaker. Louis K. Liggett will preside at this session.

BLAZE OF GEMS AT JEWEL SHOW

The first annual jewelry exposition of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Jewelers' Association at Mechanics Building starts tomorrow evening at 7 p. m. and continues until Saturday night.

The jewelry show is one of the chief attractions of the week and will draw a large number of visitors from all sections of New England and western jewelry centers are arriving in large numbers in Boston to attend this exposition.

The four other retailing associations of New England have promised their hearty support to this worthy project and will assist in placing this business on a higher pinnacle than ever before.

Chester I. Campbell, managing director of the exposition, has had a large crew of men at work completing the booths and decorating effect at Mechanics Building.

The harmonizing colors will be such that the valuable gems and gold and silver ware will be displayed with the most brilliant effect during the week.

Friday the 13th promises to be the red letter day of the week. The convention and entertainment committee is now completing arrangements for the "Supper and Banquet" at the Copley-Plaza that promises to be a unique and entertaining affair.

AMERICAN FLIERS QUIT SERVICE ON RIFF FRONT

Quessa, Morocco, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The sixteen American aviators who have been operating against Moroccan tribesmen in Morocco, carrying on with the French forces, are leaving North Africa this season's work having been completed. Yesterday standing orders of the State Department at Washington that no such is Consul-General Blake at Tangier to inform the British that their service in Morocco might infringe upon the revised statutes of the United States, they continued at their work. France contended that the aviators were not fighting for France, but that their activities constituted an affair between them and the Sultan.

Another Big Month for THE NEW YORK SUN

In October this year The New York Sun carried 1,642,102 lines of advertising, against 1,382,630 lines in October last year—a gain of 259,472 lines.

This lineage leads everything in the New York evening field and beats the nearest evening paper by 41,278 lines. Indeed, for four consecutive months—July, August, September and October—The Sun has carried more advertising each month than any other New York evening newspaper.

The Sun's gain of 259,472 lines in October this year over October last year lacks only 10,000 lines of beating the combined gains for this same period of the Evening Journal, the Evening World and the Evening Post—the individual gains of all three of these newspapers added together.

A better understanding of what advertising building of this sort means is found in the fact that these great gains in The Sun's advertising volume are all made from advertising of the very first quality. The Sun stands rigidly for character and quality in its advertising columns, precisely the same as it stands for character and quality in its reading columns, and the readers of The Sun understand this.

The advertisers and advertising agents of the country, shrewd, keen men who know their business, are not putting advertising in The Sun as a compliment to The Sun or to its owner. They are putting advertising in The Sun because it is good business to put it there—because The Sun has a clientele of men and women who have money to spend and who spend it freely alike for their necessities and their pleasures—a larger concentrated audience of character and substance in the metropolis of the nation than advertisers can reach through any other newspaper. It is this audience that the sound business man wants to meet and does meet through his advertising in The Sun.

Incidentally, The Sun might add that in this day advertising is everywhere measured by the agate line—not by the column. The agate line is a standard that never varies; newspaper columns may and do differ greatly in length.

POLICE SAY THEY HAVE EVIDENCE OF SANTA CLAUS VISIT

Children Who Believe in Santa Claus Are Sending in Their Gift Desires

Deputy Police Chief Thomas Evans has written to the Boston Evening American to say that his police officers, in years past, reported the discovery of reindeer tracks time and again on house-tops, on Christmas Eve and early the following morning.

The tinge of bells is heard by the watchful officer, then a streak of red flashes across the skyline, and Santa is gone. No trace, except reindeer footprints; no evidence except the bulging stockings filled with toys and presents. Santa seems to flash down the chimney and up again faster than you can count three.

This letter of Deputy Chief Evans will be good news to little Lillian Lancaster, of No. 20 Harding avenue, Malden. Lillian wrote us a nice friendly letter, but it seems that she is afraid there is no Santa Claus. This is, indeed, bad news to learn that a little girl so bright and helpful to her family should think that Santa will not be in Boston soon. Of course he will, Lillian. Just wait!

Josephine Gattalo, of No. 47 Cameron street, Dorchester, writes to let Santa know, through the Boston Evening American, that she and her brothers, Frank, aged five, and William, aged eight, believe in Santa Claus and that Frank wants a "good real car."

William, she says, wishes for a pair of ball-bearing skates, while Josephine, herself, wants a doll-carriage.

Here are the letters:
Editor, Boston Evening American—
I saw in your paper tonight that you wanted all the children that do not believe in Santa Claus to write to you. I don't believe in him because he don't come to my house. My mother says he only visits the rich people's houses. What little toys I and my seven little sisters and brother get my mother and father buys.

We all ways get a little present from my Grandma, and me and the rest of the family. I used to believe there was a Santa Claus. Now I know there is not one. But of course my little brothers and sisters do believe in him. I hope they will never know there isn't any. Don't forget to come to me on Xmas. I am selling Xmas seals now and it is a very easy I have had them 2 weeks now and have sold 130 cents worth. I think I got them out of the sandy snow.

JOSEPHINE GATTALO,
No. 47 Cameron St., Dorchester, Mass.

There name are William Gattalo and the other brother I have is Frank Gattalo.

William is eight years old and my other brother is Frank. He is five years old. We believe in Santa Claus. I am ten year's old. We are very poor. My father and mother do not work. I wish you would please send my brother five year's old which this name is Frank. He wishes to have a Boy's good real car and my other brother William which is eight year's old, he wishes a pair of ball bearing Skates. Josephine which is ten whole a doll carriage and I wish you would please send it as soon as you can and I wish you a happy merry Christmas.

Your truly friend,
JOSEPHINE GATTALO,

These little girls and boys are unanimous in their belief in Santa Claus and they await his benevolent coming with anticipatory smiles. They are, top row, reading from left to right: Nora Curran, Alyce Morse, Wanda Denerich, Maria Walsh, Anna Laffan, Rena Laffan. Bottom row, from left to right: John Stack, Edward Walsky, John Sullivan, Frank Sullivan, Joe Boyle.

Do not forget me, please, when he comes and my seven sisters and brothers.
Yours truly,

A fourth man, Earl S. Porter, was arrested in Weymouth, charged with receiving stolen goods.
The three arrested in Dorchester are Eugene Miller of Washington street, Dorchester; Leighton H. Pierce of Ashmont avenue, Roxbury; and Alvin Carl of Prairie avenue, Providence.
The robbers are alleged to have taken place in a tavern between Hull, Ayer Camp and Lakeville to points far down the Cape, which they are declared to have visited in stolen motor of speed and power.
The two they are alleged to have subjected included even photographs and radio sets, according to the police.
Porter claims he bought the articles in good faith, on representations by the men that they had broken up their homes and were going to New York.

Dear Sir:—
A police officer wishes to have his say about the present rumor allies in the air circulated by cynical gossip-mongers. He doubts that "there are any Santa Claus" "there are any reindeer," and "all this talk about a stocking-filling, passing dangerous crossings, returns to their homes, when stopped or stolen, does Santa Claus and have good reason to believe in Santa Claus."

First and foremost I wish to state that Santa Claus is the most successful police department I have ever been able to get anything on this widespread know, the tinge of his bells are reported annually to me by watchful policemen on your end.

"I can not say to me on Christmas Day, 'Chief—that fellow, Santa Claus has been up to his old tricks again.'"

Last night, being Christmas, and knowing his habits of visiting the scenes of his former good deeds, we were laying for him. We saw a flash of his red suit, heard the jingle of bells over the Children's Hospital, and when we rushed up to the roof there were two prisoners as sure as the brass buttons on your coat.

"We entered the hall-ports in our thumb-point gallery, and have chances of getting him in our net. He came back, but we think you to be the North Pole, where we hear he hangs out the other 364 days of the year."

That what my men say to me on Christmas Day, that even stronger evidence than my own accounts are the glowing reports that are being put into my ears by the boys of the streets. Santa Claus, head over heels, white, red, and blue, and all the rest of it, has been seen every chimney top in the city, and all the way out to the North Pole, where we hear he hangs out the other 364 days of the year."

MARTHA LEE'S RADIO CHAT

BROADCAST THROUGH STATION W.N.A.C., THE SHEPARD STORES. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I am going to buy three mattresses before Thanksgiving and do you would advise me which in your opinion, is the best kind," writes a club member from West Newton.

My answer is emphatically "Kapoc," which is the other name for silk floss. This is a heavy, vegetable product of remarkable cleanliness that comes to us from the South Sea Islands. It is remarkably "springy"; in fact you can crumple several handfuls into a tiny ball, release it, and it springs back into its original size and is just as soft as the down on day-old chicks.

Best of all, Kapoc will not absorb moisture and I think few of us realize how much perspiration the human body throws off while we are sleeping. It is self-ventilating, too, and almost fifty percent lighter than ordinary mattress fillers. A size and air bath quickly restores a Kapoc mattress to its original fluffiness.

I can hear some of you saying, "I thought a hair mattress was the best in the world." I am sure you have in mind the real hair mattresses of our mothers and grandmothers' days, but do you know that in these days of automobiles, real horse hair is almost as scarce as hen's teeth and extremely expensive as well. A mattress made of pure horse hair would cost between fifty and one hundred dollars.

Others of you probably have a leaning to cotton felt mattresses. These have their excellent points, but the chief objection to them is that they will absorb moisture and the perspiration thrown off by our bodies gradually cakes the upper layer of the cotton-felt into a hard crust.

Of course, the method of curing the Kapoc has much to do with the excellence of the mattress. I am writing Mrs. J. R. S., telling her of the Boston factory which makes the finest Kapoc mattresses. I believe in all this wide world, no particle is as clean as that sample of cash shipment of Kapoc received in sent to the Institute of Technology for examination, and experts there advise the mattress company that the treatment this particular shipment of Kapoc needs to make the very best possible mattress.

Since we spend a third of our life in bed and sleep is the foundation of our health, surely it is up to every one of us to see that we are getting the deep, restful slumber that is the only tonic for the weary body and mind.

If any of our other members would like to know the name of the finest of all time mattresses, a line to me will bring the information to you promptly.

VALENTINO KISSES HAND OF PETROVA IN COURT

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.)—Rudolph Valentino appeared today in the Supreme Court as an "expert" witness for Olga Petrova, in the trial of the $5,000 suit of William Henry Holt, ex-naval stores keeper of the British government in the West Indies, who charges the actress with his play, "The Red Wig," and put it out as "The White Peacock." Valentino received the courtroom after the defense had rested, but was permitted to testify. He went immediately to Madame Petrova and bowed deeply. Mme. Petrova raised her hand and the "chick" of the screen kissed it, in the accompaniment of soft-drawn sighs of the flapperist sprinkled through the audience.

A VEGEX BABY

Nothing is so dear to the heart of the American mother as the health and welfare of her children, and no one is quicker than she to take advantage of the help that modern science offers to her. Vegex is one of these helps, and I know you will be interested in what this wonderful concentrated vegetable extract has done for a Westfield baby.

This baby, now twenty-three months old, has had Vegex included in her diet from her first week in this world and is called the perfect child by physicians and medical examiners. She is fully as tall as the average child of thirty-three months and as heavy as a child forty-two months, weighing 22.4 pounds today, and being 35.6 inches tall. She is not only large for her age, but is exceptionally well built. Her flesh is very firm, but she is not fat. Her teeth came early and are well developed and well formed. Her mentality is unusual; she already speaks two languages and has passed many of the regular tests for a four-year-old child.

During her first week in the world this little girl was given two ounces of Vegex broth in a bottle in addition to her regular food, and the quantity was gradually increased to four ounces daily. As she began to eat solid food, and other vegetable, Vegex was used in her preparation and was continued as a tonic, and at times given in her milk. She also takes Vegex Almonds regularly and calls them "Bimbies," denoting their deliciousness each morning as soon as she wakes up.

If you have little folks in your home wouldn't you like me to send you a list of just what makes up this potent baby's food? I will also gladly send you the interesting Vegex Cook Book, which contains many everyday recipes showing how Vegex can be incorporated into your everyday diet for your entire family. Vegex is an extremely important member of your food family and I do want you all to become well acquainted with it.

HOW TO MANICURE WITHOUT SCISSORS OR STICK

We read much now-a-days about "every woman her own manicurist," but unfortunately there are manicuring products which damage the cuticle and enamel and result in hanging nails and roughened finger tips. If you have been disappointed with these haphazard methods I know you will be charmed with manicuring the Alabastrine way.

Alabastrine you know is the celebrated cream which softens the cuticle and prevents hanging nails and roughened finger tips. It also prevents the nails from chipping or cracking and keeps them always in perfect condition. The cuticle should never be cut for this thickness and makes it grow the faster. Alabastrine does away with the cuticle knife and accomplishes much more satisfactory results, too. If you will follow these simple directions:

Dip a piece of wet flannel in the Alabastrine, using plenty of water and gradually work up all the little fragments of the skin around the outside with the thumb nail covered with this piece of wet flannel without the use of a knife or a stick and thus preserve the enamel of your nail. Then file and polish in the usual way.

Alabastrine is excellent for children's nails, too, and used as a lotion on your hands will leave the skin soft and white. I will have quite a few copies of the interesting booklet "To Have and to Hold Beautiful Hands" published by Bechem's Laboratories, manufacturers of Alabastrine, and will be delighted to send you a copy on request.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM A CLUB MEMBER

I am sure that all my readers will be as interested as I was in a letter that came to me last week about Noxon, the cleaner-polish, which of course you have noticed represented on our page each Monday. I must share part of her letter with you.

"Having read your description of Noxon Polish on the Martha Lee page I became interested—although I rather doubted—to be frank—whether any polish could really clean and polish all metals and still be equally good for glass and porcelain. As my experience had been to the contrary, however, I tried a can of Noxon and I found it perfectly splendid. It did a wonderful job on my copper boiler and stovepipes and then I tried it on a mirror, flinty fine, and right here is where the fun began.

"The can disappeared, but after a vain search I concluded that it had gone in the waste as I bought another can. After two weeks I was amazed to find this, too, had vanished. Asking my husband if he had seen it brought an evasive 'Not lately,' and then my wife began to fumble because I haven't lived with him twelve years for nothing. The garage was the answer. Like all the men he drags everything to the garage that isn't fastened down, and, sure enough, there I found my can of Noxon along with my 'paring knife and an egg-beater, for what purpose Heaven only knows. When he opened up I found out he used it for the nickel radiator and to polish the car windows, so now we have two cans of Noxon Polish at our house as we at last agree on one thing. Noxon is the best polish we ever have used and it seems to be good for everything."

Why not pass this hint along to your man of the house? I am sure that he as well as you will be delighted with the excellent work accomplished by this king of polishes.

EXIT THE DISHPAN

Is there anything in the world that we women dislike more than our three-times-a-day stint of dish washing? We spend time and money leaving our hands stiff and sore. Alabastrine way" only to have much of our good work undone by ten minutes in the dishpan. From time to time various dish washers have come on the market and I have spent a good many hours during the past year in trying out these different appliances, hoping eventually to find one that would really wash dishes clean, quickly and without a lot of elaborate maneuvering. One after another proved to have their respective faults. They splashed the water, or did not wash clean, or were more trouble to manipulate than a dish mop would have been.

But at last I have found a dish washer that I am glad to admit to our Martha Lee page and to introduce to our club members and readers.

This is the Darlo Dish Washer, one of the appliances that has a permanent, hinged place in any kitchen equipment. The Darlo fits on any faucet; the water passes through a soap container and through a flexible rubber hose with a small nozzle and onto the dishes which are stacked in a drain in your sink. A turn of the faucet pours scalding hot, clear water through the hose instead of the soapy water, and your dishes dry quickly without wiping. For pots and kettles there come two splendid strong brushes which fit on the end of the hose nozzle and scrub which the hot soapy water passes while you use them as you would any kettle brush. The Darlo has many other features, too, but there isn't space today to tell you about them all. I will, however, send you an interesting booklet on the Darlo and will be glad to tell you where you can purchase this really efficient kitchen member if you are interested in it.

YALE VS. TIGERS IN BIG GAME OF WEEK-END

'BIG THREE' TITLE TO BE AT STAKE IN 'BOWL' TILT

By NICK FLATLEY
The football crowd at the Yale Bowl, New Haven, Nov. 9, 1925, was the largest of the season. The game was a close contest, with Yale leading 14-0 at halftime. The Tigers, however, fought back in the second half, and the game ended in a 14-14 tie.

The tie between the two teams was a surprise to many, as Yale had been favored to win. The game was played in a spirit of sportsmanship, and both teams showed great skill and determination.

Play this hunch and you can't lose

GET out that little old jimmy-pipe. Fill the bowl to the brim with Prince Albert and light up! Will you like it? Man, man! Does a kid like ice cream? Can a bullfrog dive? You bet you will like it, like you never liked anything before.

Because, what a man's smoke-appetizing hankers for, Prince Albert's got nothing else except! Yes, sir, you can bet your life on that. You'll fire-up right after breakfast and stay with it till the little blue stars wig-wag "Good night."

Never was a pipe tobacco like good old P. A. Cool and sweet and soothing, the smoke zooms up the stem, bowling over pet peeves and filling your system with a new kind of joy. And how kind it is to your tongue and throat. That's because the Prince Albert process cuts out bite and parch ab-so-lute-ly!

So, slip into top-speed and head for the nearest store where they hand out jimmy-pipe joy in tidy red tins. If you haven't got a jimmy-pipe, get one now. Then borrow a match and you're all set for a smoke experience!

Monday starts the showing of Corinne Griffith in "The Great Train Robbery". This is a newspaper story of a little girl who is a want ad solicitor. She calls prospects over the phone and solicits their ads. It may be a case they have for sale or a used car or what-not, but she calls and tries to get their ad for our paper.

If she makes fifty calls a day, how many ads does she get? How many turn her down? How many invite her out in the evening? What's it all about and how does she meet these temptations? She knows they all don't love her—poor kid!

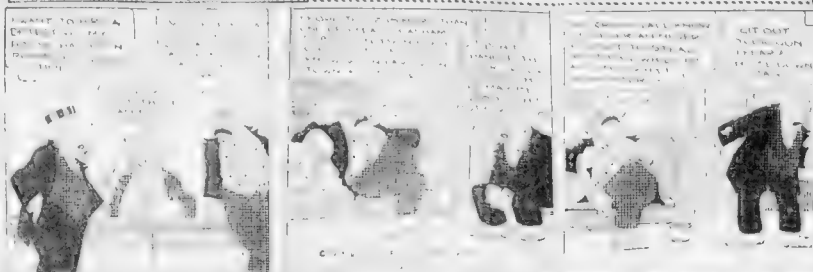

We want you to see "her picture," and are scattering one hundred names picked at random from the telephone and city directory through the Classified Ad columns of this paper every day. If your name appears, bring the paper in to 93 Summer Street where your tickets are being held. Look every day, for there will be new names each day.

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

DO YOU KNOW WHAT A PEARL IS?

By Foxy Grandpa
BUNNY, Bobby and I were walking along Fifth Avenue—at least Bobby and I were walking.

Along the avenue we walked, stopping now and then to look into the windows and admire the pretty things which are displayed there. After a while we came to a jeweler's window. Bobby stopped and I stopped, too. Bobby's hand came out of my pocket as we stood before the window where a beautiful string of pearls was shown on a pillow of black velvet. How they shone and glistened in the sunlight. It seemed as if there were a thousand colors trying to get through the creamy film of the pearls. "What kind of mine do they think I am, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby, looking up into my face. "I know there are diamond mines—but I never heard of a pearl mine." "Nor did anybody else," came a muffled laugh from my pocket. "They don't come from mines, Bobby," I said. "Pearls are found in the bottom of the sea." "Just rolling around loose?" asked the boy. "I don't see how they ever catch them." Just then a friend of mine came up to me. We chatted for a while

And I could feel Bobby getting restless, standing first on one foot and then on the other. Don't times seem long like that when your mother or father meets a friend and they stand talking? I remember it myself, so I noted the conversation and said "goodbye" to my friend. We turned into a hotel at the corner, went into the restaurant and ordered lunch. I had left Bobby in my overcoat pocket. He said he preferred to wait for us rather than be so conspicuous. I ordered lunch. The waiter brought our first course, and as he was passing the horradellish Bobby asked:

"Tell me some more about pearls, Foxy Grandpa. How do they grow? Do they grow in shells—that kind?" "The very kind you have on your plate before you," I said. "Oysters!" exclaimed Bobby. (Copyright 1923 by International Feature Service, Inc.)

Developing a Girl's Talent

Some Fathers and Mothers WISELY Realize That a Girl Should Not Be Considered Merely "Somebody's Future Wife"

Elinor Patterson, of Chicago, as the Nun in "The Miracle."

In this column are printed two photographs of a young girl whose parents wisely allowed her to develop her talent instead of following the usual custom and having her wait for some more or less desirable young man to come around and ask her to marry him.

The old-fashioned idea was that a girl, not COMPELLED to work for a living, should sit around with hands folded, eyes cast down, WAITING.

Lately that has changed to some extent. The young girl, instead of sitting with hands folded and eyes cast down, hops around with her hair bobbed, skirts cut off short and sometimes, so it is alleged, with a small whiskey flask attached to her stocking. In either case, sitting around or hopping around is a mistake.

Girls, like boys, should be encouraged to develop talent if they possess it. The mother gives the child at least as much, mentally and physically, as does the father. In fact, sons, as Galton proved, usually inherit talent through the mother.

For that reason it is important that girls should be permitted to develop their talents, which means also to develop emotion and understanding.

The photographs in this column illustrate the text. "Give your girl a chance to show what she can do." They are photographs of Miss Elinor Patterson of Chicago, a young girl of talent and ambition, whose parents, in spite of their being what is usually called "people of wealth and position," take a common sense view of life.

They do not believe in treating the ability of a daughter as the Chinese treat their daughters' feet, and this young girl, who HAS talent, is allowed to use it, enjoy it, and with it GIVE PLEASURE TO OTHERS.

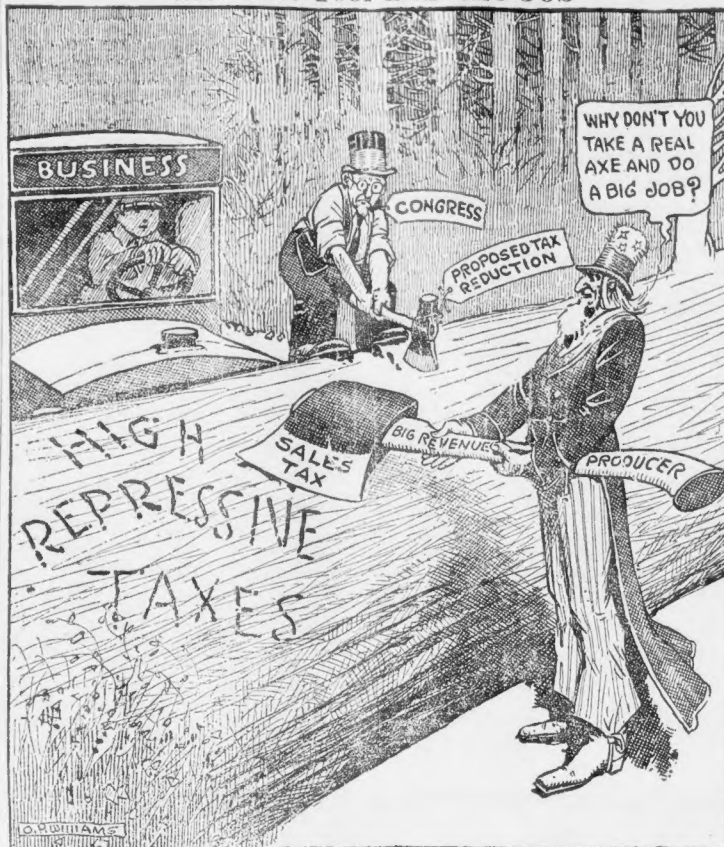

ELINOR PATTERSON—A serious and beautiful young face.

A year or two ago Gifford Pinchot, the Governor of Pennsylvania, and a man of wealth, was congratulated upon his good sense in permitting his daughter to go upon the stage, in the same part, by the way, as that now played by Elinor Patterson.

Such a step on the part of parents requires some courage, for habit, which is powerful, and "conventional respectability" are against it.

The father and mother that do not hesitate to allow their

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury
A LOT of men seem to think that because they marry a girl, they no longer have to tip their hat to her.

SOME guys come back from the altar and throw the book away.

THEY forget about being gentlemen as soon as the honey-moon's over.

NO matter how long you've been married to a woman you're supposed to take your hat off when you kiss her.

THIS is one reason for a lot of single men going without hats.

IT doesn't make any difference how many times you meet your wife during the day, you should tip your hat to her each time. Tidy and forget you're married to her and treat her politely.

BE sentimentally and courteous as though you were meeting your stenographer.

A WOMAN appreciates good manners even if they come from her husband.

HUSBANDS and wives could live much happier and get along much better if they only forgot the existence of each other and treat each other like ladies and gentlemen.

STARTING BUSINESS BACK IN YOUR HOME TOWN

As a man employed in the city you have had at times probably a great desire to return to the old home or to some other quiet place, buy or establish a little business and away from the hustle-bustle as well as the uncertainty of your city job.

For many years this has been in your mind but, year after year, you have kept just ahead of your debts and hence you are no nearer your ideal; you are still plodding along in the same old rut.

Sometimes you will get down to brass tacks, you say, figure out how much money you must have to carry out this dream and then says the cash.

So far you have taken it out in dreaming.

It would be so much easier to go about as you please, letting the younger men do the hustling for you, while you bossed the job.

Now, the secret you can get to carry out that plan the better.

By DR. FRANK CRANE
OUR forefathers wrote in symbols. When they wanted to express an idea they drew a picture.

All words were originally pictures of things. The first communications of mankind were in naming things. Everything in the physical world stands for some truth in the spiritual world.

In fact, language, which is the effort of the soul to express itself, is but an effort of the spirit to use material things for its purposes. The spirit is part of the cosmos also.

Originally all spiritual or intellectual truths were physical. Right meant straight, and crooked, which is now applied to actions, meant a crooked article. No transgression meant going beyond the bounds and tribulation meant being beaten with a fall.

The nearer you come to the language of savages the less use you have of verbs and prepositions, and the more you make use of nouns.

Slang in this case is a kind of primeval language. All language is poetry. It consists in comparing spiritual things with physical.

This you can see in all the proverbs of old. They all speak of physical things, such as "A rolling stone gathers no moss," "A setting hen lays no eggs," and so on.

One's mental or poetical powers consist in tracing the relation between a material thing and a physical one.

Things that have no spiritual analogy are meaningless. They only become meaningful when there is a spiritual intent put into them.

The trouble with fine writing is that it gets away from things and is not close enough to the material world.

Reason, which perceives the analogy of things and narrows matter to mind, is the attribute of man.

We approach common sense the more we get away from highdown expression down to common words of everyday life.

MEDDLING WITH THE CALENDAR

By Garrett P. Serviss
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

REFORMERS of the calendar are now talking of changing the dates of the seasons.

The chief trouble that they encounter is the fact that nature doesn't change the seasons at all in the way the almanac does; she lets them glide one into another, like the colors of the spectrum; and as it is impossible to point out on a ribbon or prismatically dispersed sunlight exactly where red becomes orange, orange, yellow, green, and so on, so no one can tell on what day precisely spring, summer, autumn, and winter begin.

It has been proposed that the statistical method be applied to settle the question. They would harness the unruly days with rectangular co-ordinates and then, in the manner due to mathematicians, "draw a curve" of climate, which the statist would be assumed to obey—on the average. At fixed points on the curve spring, summer, autumn and winter would be expected to begin.

Pigeons and Squirrels
To the Friend of the People:
Two things I would like to see accomplished in this city. Banned every pigeon on Boston Common with a recommendation of mercy. Multiply the squirrels. They do not fly. Allow no parking of autos on any street in the business section of Boston longer than one hour.

What makes congestion in Boston is parking of autos on both sides of the street. JOHN C. MALCOMB, Boston.

Cost of Crime
To the Friend of the People:
In this country we spend three billions of dollars yearly for crime committed. This is one-eighth of the total amount spent in this country for the World War.

This means that it costs every man, woman and child in this country twenty-five dollars each.

Some of this crime is committed by persons on parole from hospitals for mental diseases.

And don't worry about the "effect on the children later." Consider and study the career, character and achievements of Olympias, daughter of King Neoptolemus. Her history has never been adequately written, but we know some things about her.

She felt that she had ability, and she used it. She danced strange dances, such as would startle even Mr. Ziegfeld at his best, her only costume being large serpents that she wrapped around her in the dance. She consulted magicians, and would not tolerate ill treatment. When her husband, Philip of Macedonia, married a younger wife with Olympias still living, Olympias, it is supposed, put an end to Philip.

Was Olympias a failure as a mother because she allowed her talent full bent in youth? She was not, for her son was Alexander the Great.

Give your daughter a chance, let her at least show what she can DO. And don't suppose that capable motherhood depends on just "sitting around."

F. S.—Morris Gest, and his associate in "The Miracle," Max Reinhardt, are to be congratulated on their good judgment in selecting talent.

Developing a Girl's Talent

daughter to go with young men to modern dances, where at least some of the young men get drunk, are shocked at the suggestion that a girl of talent should be allowed to develop personality, and ability on the stage, which offers one of the few interesting careers open to women.

If your daughter has talent, and ambition to develop it, don't hold her back, and don't worry about "moral surroundings." A girl's moral surroundings are what HER OWN CHARACTER MAKES THEM.
